H.M.S. "PINAFORE"

The crew of Her Majesty's Ship "Pinafore" are busy, awaiting the arrival of the First Lord of the Admiralty, Sir Joseph Porter. They are a 'gallant crew' and respect their Commander, Captain Corcoran

The Captain's daughter, we soon learn, is loved by Ralph Rackstraw, 'a mere sailor', but she is the intended bride of Sir Joseph Porter. When she tells her father of her affections, he is shocked and warns her of the hopelessness of this romance.

Josephine, remembering her father's words, rejects Ralph's advances, but his intended suicide causes her to repent and reveal to Ralph her true feelings.

But what of Sir Joseph and Captain Corcoran, upon whom Buttercup, the bumboat woman, has cast a loving eye? What secret does she know that might help Josephine and Ralph.

But are all their plans to be foiled by Dick Deadeye the 'triangular sailor' who hates the crew and who, in return, is hated?
